Nurse Nora asks Nick what would make him better.

“Let me think,” said Nick but before he could say anything, Nora left the room and then she returned with a knitted hat.

“This knitted hat will help you,” she said.

“No,” said Nick and he hid under the blanket.

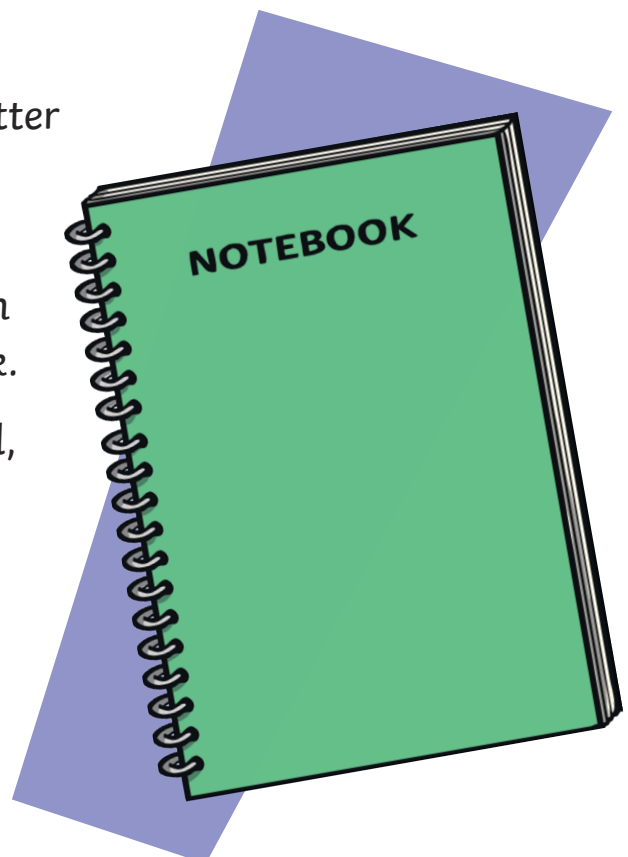

“Tell me what would make you feel better Nick,” said Nora.

“Let me think,” he said but before he could say anything, Nora left the room and then she returned with a notebook.

“This notebook will help you,” she said, “You can write in it.”

“No” said Nick and he hid under the blanket.

"Tell me what would make you feel better Nick," said Nora.

"Let me think," he said but before he could say anything, Nora left the room and she returned with some nuts.

"These nuts will help you," she said.

"No," said Nick and he hid under the blanket.

"Tell me what would make you feel better Nick," said Nora.

"Let me think," he said but before he could say anything, Nora left the room and she returned with some noodles.

"These noodles will help you," she said.

"No," said Nick and he hid under the blanket.

"Please, please tell me what would make you feel better Nick," said Nora.

"Let me think," he said but before he could say anything, Nora left the room and she returned with a nectarine.

"This nectarine will help you," she said.

"No," said Nick and he hid under the blanket.

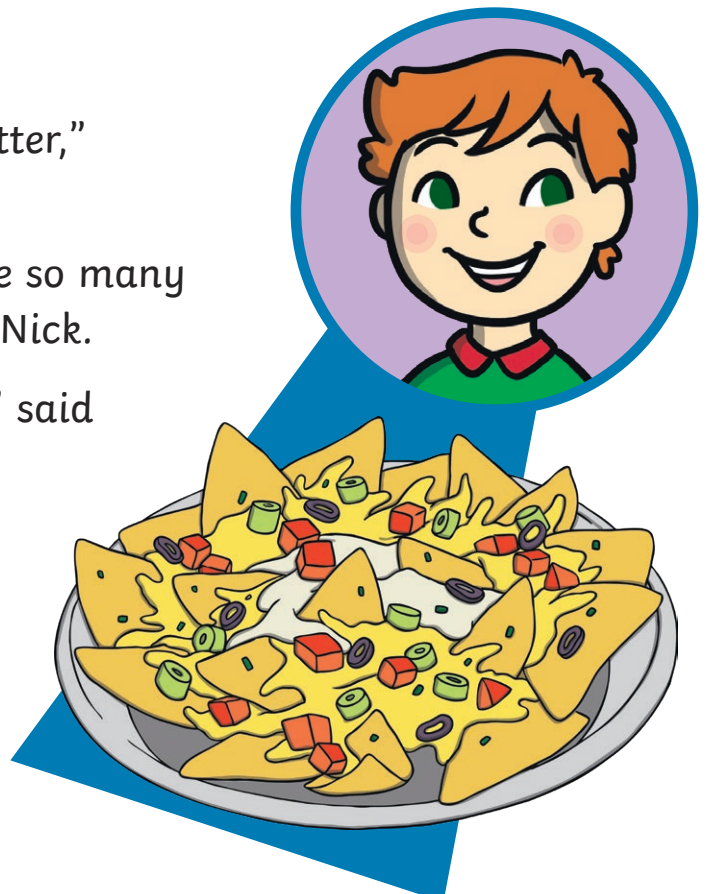

"I know what will make you feel better," said Nora.

"No, no, no Nora! You have given me so many things to make me feel better," said Nick.

"I am not taking no for an answer!" said Nora and off she went. But this time, Nora returned with a plate of nachos. Nachos are Nick's favourite.

"You are a nice nurse, Nora. You made me feel better. Thank you!" said Nick.
